SCAG: Local Response to Regional Problems

As a Southern California resident, you know about the advantages of living in the Southland: our mild climate, varied geography, low-density development and casual lifestyle.

But you also know about the problems created by the very attractions that invite people here. Urban sprawl, traffic congestion, smog, housing shortages and water pollution plague cities and counties throughout the area. Ignoring man-made boundaries, these problems have become so widespread and complex that no single community can solve them.

In response to the regional scope of these issues, the Southern California Association of Governments (SCAG) was created in 1965 by the counties of Imperial, Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, San Bernardino and Ventura and cities within these counties.

The supervisors, mayors and councilmembers representing these local governments have worked through SCAG to develop a strategy for growth in Southern California. Their shared goal is to protect and improve the quality of life for all people living here.

To accomplish this objective, SCAG coordinates many activities affecting local government and serves as a forum where decisions can be made about the future of the region.

Under the direction of its members, SCAG develops comprehensive plans in four major program areas—the Regional Development Guide, transportation, air quality and water quality. These activities are funded by local contributions and federal and state grants.

SCAG is one of nearly 700 regional planning bodies across the nation working with local governments to meet areawide needs. They have improved intergovernmental relationships at the local, state and federal levels. In addition, regional planning encourages cooperation and negotiation among local communities to reflect their economic, environmental and social interdependence.

SCAG's Organizational Structure

*Committees also work with South Coast Air Quality Management District

The General Assembly is the overall governing body of the organization. It meets twice a year to establish the policies which are to be carried out by SCAG's Executive Committee.

The General Assembly's membership consists of one voting delegate from each city and county, with the exception of Los Angeles County which has two voting delegates and the City of Los Angeles with three voting delegates.

The policy advisory committees provide support to the Executive Committee and the General Assembly in SCAG's main program areas. Composed of local elected officials, the four committees meet on a periodic basis to formulate policy suggestions. They are assisted in their work by specialized subcommittees and technical committees.

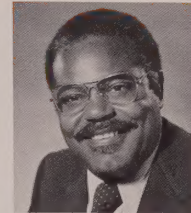

The Executive Committee

Charged with carrying out policies established by the General Assembly, the Executive Committee is composed of 20 elected officials from member cities and counties. They include one delegate each from the county governments of Imperial, Orange, Riverside, San Bernardino and Ventura and two delegates from the County of Los Angeles; also one delegate representing the cities in each county and three at-large delegates. For 1978, at-large members are the cities of Costa Mesa, Ontario and Santa Monica. In addition, the cities of Los Angeles and Long Beach have permanent seats on the Executive Committee; Los Angeles has three delegates and Long Beach has one. All delegates have alternates to serve in their absence.

As SCAG's primary decision-making body, the Executive Committee incorporates in its actions all of the organization's planning activities — in transportation, housing, environmental quality, land use and human services — to develop one comprehensive plan for Southern California.
